Also, of course, it would be impossible to prevent a serious break if the situation in the Philmarket as a whole was active and irregular. Three or four special movements af-fected the general speculation. These in-cluded a sharp advance in Sugar Refining on reports that managers of the company on reports that managers of the company have assured their friends that the next dividend on the common stock would be at the same rate as paid heretofore. Another feature was a raily of two points in Burlington from the lowest point. The activity in American Steel and Wire at advancing prices continued.

The most decisive movement of all, however, was in Ontario and Western, which on sales of approximately 100,000 shares closed nearly two points higher than yesterday. The speculation in this stock was crompanied by rumors of an impending change in the capitalization of the company, which were not confirmed, and by reports, which were much more plausible, that the control of the road is passing into the hands of interests identified with New York Central.

Of the less active stocks Third Avenue

Of the less active stocks Third Avenue Railroad was most conspicuous at a net advance of seventeen points. The trading in it was unusually heavy. Reports that the company is to be absorbed by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company could not be confirmed. Other strong features were international Silver. Great Northern preferred, and Metropolitan Street Railway. In spite of the final selling movement by the professional element, the tone at the close was fairly firm.

A week in the New York stock market begun with advancing prices and a general expectation of a continuance of the bull evement ended vesterday with general declines, a bad bank statement, and some declines a bad bank statement, and some uneasiness as to the immediate future range of prices. It is probable that the larger number of average-sized bulls are disconcerted and disappointed over the out-come. It is difficult to trace the reasons for the change from advancing prices on Tuesday to a general decline on Thursday, but even in this case it must be remembered that the best season for the combent that the boom was on again in full force. The same of the more arrived that the best season for the company is nearing its close. Rubber stock has a way of declining when people begin has a way of declining when people begin

A House Which Stood By Its Travel-(From the Lewiston Journal.)

"Some firms stand by their traveling men and some don't," said the chap that sells railroad supplies.
"I've got a firm that does," he con-tinued. "The old man—the founder of the house—is dead, but he's left a son that shifted from horses to wires and needed some oil headlights. I went to the fellow who was running it—an old schoolmate of mine, by the way.

"Yes,' he said, I want some headlights, and I want 'em right off. What's your rock-bottom price?"
"I can sell 'em to you for $8 apiece."

said L Too high, he said; 'I never could buy anything of you. But I'm going into Boston tonight and I'll drop in tomorrow and buy 'em of the house. You have to go to a house to get the right price. No man on the road can give you bottom figures." I said all right, but when my daily report went in on the Pullman I mentioned seeing thus and so quoting them this and that. The report reached the house with the morning mail and the old man rend it at 8 o'clock. "Later on the Maine fellow showed up.

"The Maine man said who he was and that he wanted ten headlights.

"Twelve dollars! gasped the railroad man. 'Why, your traveling man offered iem to use for $8.

'em to me for $8."

"'Why didn't you buy 'em o! him?" retorted the old man. 'I can't afford to sell em for that. If he wants to sell headlights for 50 cents apiece I suppose we've got to back him up in it, but if you buy any of me you'll pay $12 for 'em.' "But can't you fill the order and give your Maine man the credit."

"No, I can't," stapped the business man. He can write his own orders.
What'n blazes do you suppose we keep him for—to travel round and then let us do his work here in the office? No, sir; won't write any order for him or any other traveling man. "The Maine man was getting raw under the collar. 'Don't seem to care whether you sell goods or not, he said finally.

"No, can't say as we do. We've lived without your trade for forty years and I guess 'twon't break us if we don't get it ow, was the answer.

"The Maine man left. He scoured the city, but he couldn't find headlights in stock anywhere. Buffied, he turned back to the office he had quit with his head in the air. He tried to get his order in through some one else, but 'twas no use— the price of headlights was still $12 and showed no symptoms of dropping.

showed no symptoms of dropping.
"At last he asked where their Maine traveling man could be found.
"In Bangor," grunted the old man.
'Perhaps if you wire him, he may stop. off and see you when you get home. And p'raps he won't; I don't know whether he will. P'raps he'll sell you headlights for $8 and p'raps he won't. That's $4 cheaper than I am selling them, but if he wants to sell 'em for half a dollar I haven't got any objections-we'll stand by

"The Maine man wired me and I made him come up to the station on my way home sold him ten headlights while the train waited, and from that day till he sold out of the railroad business he never went into the house to try and get 'ower

(From the Detroit Free Press.) A stalwart man of seedy appearance rang a doorbell on Grand River Avenue and was met by the man of the house.

"For the love of heaven, sir," began the caller, "buy some needles of me. I've been going from house to house since yesat the advance offerings became more lib-eral, resulting in losses of early improve-ment. There is no new feature to the market. Trading is largely professional and the predominating sentiment bearish on the theory that but little damage has resulted to the growing erop from recent will take the slocks, as the position of the company is an alluring one, with its practicable monopoly in a business constantly growing in a wonderful way. There will be no doubt as to the success of the plan of the insider if the market broadens into a big speculative boom, for then a stock will not need merit to be gladly grabbed for by the public.

In connection with this buoyancy of the industrial shares there are many tips out of line. The grow man of the house, "Come in," said the did they dump it into the profit and loss account? Always been interested in the different methods employed by different houses. Don't remember, hey? What is your plan for detecting a transposition of figures when you try to strike a balance? Simple, you know. Never learned that, hey? In making your annual statement of assets and liabilities in which relation that you place the firm's surplus?

did you place the firm's surplus?"
But by this time the caller felt as though But by this time the caller felt as though all his pot-metal needles were creeping around just under his skin. He was perspiring like a Polar bear in a tropical climate, and his eyes seemed to be searching for some hole to creep into. "I'm goin," he said, huskily, "You've cut my tire, boss," as he backed toward the door, "I tho'rt I had a scheme as was a world-beater, but it's a bloomin' fizzle. Put me in yer N. G. account, Mr. Bookkeeper," and the needle merchant took only one step in getting from the doorway to the sidewalk.
